Summary for Overview Page:

The Office of Chief Disciplinary Counsel (OCDC) is the agency established by the Supreme Court of Missouri to handle ethical complaints involving lawyers. In this interesting and important position, staff counsel investigates allegations that a lawyer has violated the Rules of Professional Conduct and prosecutes those cases where the lawyer's misconduct poses a threat to the public or to the integrity of the legal profession.

Desired Skills and Experience

- An understanding of effective investigative practices
- Proven pleading and litigation skills based upon trial experience is highly desired
- Successful candidates will have at least 5 years of experience in the practice of law
- Appellate experience is a plus

More reasons to apply:

The OCDC is located in Jefferson City, but welcomes qualified candidates from across the state. Some travel required. While there are times when Staff Counsel would be expected to be in Jefferson City, this position allows for some remote work.

The OCDC offers a generous benefit package that includes insurance (health, dental, vision, life) and retirement benefits.

Annual starting salary ranges from $80,000 - $92,000, but actual salary will be commensurate with experience.

While the OCDC is an agency of the Supreme Court of Missouri, this is not a position with the State of Missouri.

How to apply: Qualified candidates should submit a cover letter, resume, writing sample, and three professional references to OCDCJobs@courts.mo.gov.
